

Goitse

The multi-award-winning quintet Goitse continues to blaze trails as one of Ireland's most dynamic and celebrated traditional ensembles. Forged in the white-hot creative crucible of Limerick's Irish World Academy, the band is now celebrating 15 years of touring worldwide, captivating audiences with their signature blend of original compositions and timeless traditional tunes.

The gripping rhythm section of Colm Phelan and Conal O'Kane sets a powerful drive for the music, while the sweet, charismatic voice of County Louth's Áine McGeeney draws audiences into a song the way few performers can.

Danny Collins, a multi-instrumentalist All-Ireland Champion, is known for his distinctively rhythmic and expressive piano accordion playing, while Alan Reid features on banjo and bouzouki, drawing from an extensive knowledge of archival collections that enrich the band's repertoire.

Known for electrifying live performances, Goitse has built a reputation for energy, warmth and an uncanny ability to connect with audiences everywhere. Their artistry has not gone unnoticed: the band members and their music were recently featured on the hit Apple TV series Bad Sisters, introducing their sound to an even broader global audience.

From intimate stages to major international festivals, Goitse continues to redefine what it means to be ambassadors of Irish traditional music, pushing boundaries while honoring the past.
